I have always supported the Cook County Farm Bureau (CCFB) from the beginning of my career with Country Financial. A CCFB membership provides substantial discounts on national brands, local dining, and entertainment. It also provides access to the IAA Credit Union and the many available loans through them. The membership pays for itself from utilizing any of the available services.

I take great satisfaction in dedicating myself to diligent efforts aimed at delivering top-notch service to my clients. Assisting individuals is a core aspect of my life and I find immense joy in being able to serve both my clients and the community. Moreover, I relish the opportunity to meet new people and foster personal connections. Engaging in open and transparent conversations serves as a simple and effective means for my clients and me to establish a connection and ultimately assist them in achieving their financial security objectives.

I have assisted and been involved in activities to support various humanitarian efforts such as food drives for the needy and hungry, and packaging foods for organizations such as Feed My Starving Children.

I am quite passionate about a Japanese martial art called Aikido, which means harmony. It also is known as the art of peace. It focuses on harmonizing with your opponent to bring peaceful resolutions to situations involving conflict. I have been a student of the art for decades and I instruct on the weekends. In essence, Aikido is about self-mastery, personal development, and self-awareness. To learn more, please visit <https://nsaikido.com> or attend a class.
