Using topics of food waste, insecurity and the focus on local foods, we will explore the science, math and other cross curricular connections on using agriculture to develop classroom lessons. How does food get from field to fork and how are science and technology involved? Lessons will review how engineering has impacted food production from hand planting seeds to GPS technology on tractors. Additional activities will form connections to careers within food science, soil science and food distribution. A portion of the program will include farm to table as it relates to holidays.
